is very frequently tr. by the English word Lord, which in our Bible is always printed in small capitals for the sake of distinction; also some times when the original word is not Jehovah, as in that very remarkable passage, Ps. 110:1. where the original is Adonai. This word is also ap-MAN, s. Man was in his original state a very noble and exalted creature, being placed as the head and lord of this world, having all the creatures in subjection to him. The powers and operation of his mind were extensive, capacious, and perfect; capable of contemplating on the works of God with infinite pleasure and delight, and of performing his will without the least deviation. But by sinning against his Creator, his mind is vitiated, corrupted, and debased; and he is in a ruined, lost, miserable, and wretched state. Hence it is asked, What is man? Ps. 8:4. The Heb. word for man is Enosh, i. e. sorry, wretched, and incurably sick; to denote his condition, in his apostasy from God. Man is called Ish, Ps. 4:3. || 49:2.

i. e. noble, dignified, and valiant; and Adam, which signifies earthy, and is put for the baser sort of people, Pa. 49:2. Is. 2:9.

MANDRAKES, s. are distinguished into male and female.
They are of a strong narcotic quality, and mentioned in some ancient writers as convenient to be given before an amputation, to address the sense of pain, by stupefying the patient; but modern practice uses it not for any such use.
They are reckoned cooling, and recommended in inflammations of the eyes. The mandrakes which Rachel desired, are by some called violets, by others lilies or jessamine, by others citrons, &c.

MERCY-Seat. s. Propitiary, was the covering of the ark, in which the tables of the law were deposited. The cover was of gold, and at its ends were fixed the two cherubims of the same metal, which, by their wings extending forward, seemed to form a throne for the majesty of God. Ps. 80:1. and the ark was as it were his footstool. It was an eminent type of Christ, who, by his atonement, covered our sins, and bore the curse for us; standing between God and the curse of the law for our sakes, that God might look on the law through Christ, as fulfilled by him on our behalf. Ro. 3:25.

MOURNING signifies, (1) Godly sorrow for sin, Mat. 5:4. (2) Moderate sorrow under afflictions, Ge. 22:2. (3) Gracious lamentation, Mat. 24:30.
The Hebrews, in mourning for their dead, wept, tore their cloth, s. smote their breasts, fasted, lay on the ground, and went barefoot. The time of mourning was commonly 7 days; and sometimes longer or shorter, as circumstances differed. They used to hire mourners, Jer. 9:17. But the high-priest was to use no signs of mourning; being herein a type of Christ, and his saints in heaven, Le. 21:10, 11, 12.

MYSTERY, s. A secret, a thing hid, or beyond comprehension. A mystery is not a thing contrary to reason, nor utterly unknown as to its being; but a matter of which we have clear evidence as to its existence, yet the nature or mode of it is incomprehensible. In this sense all the doctrines of the gospel are mysteries, because there are inscrutable depths in them, Ep. 1:9.

OFFERING, s. The Hebrews had several kinds of offerings, which they presented at the tabernacle and temple. Some were free-will-offerings, as the peace-offerings, vows, offerings of wine, oil, bread, and other things, made to the ministers of the Lord for devotion. Others were of obligation, as the first-fruits, tithes, and sin-offerings. All offerings in general they called Corban: But the offerings of bread, salt, fruits, and liquors, as wine, and oil, which were presented to the temple, they called Mincha.
The Hebrews had properly but 3 sorts of sacrifices, (1) The burnt-offering, which was wholly consumed, only the priest and the shew-bread, 7:8.
(2) The sacrifice for sin, or expiation for sin, who had fallen into any offence against the law, Le. 4. (3) The peace-offering, which was offered voluntarily in praise to God, or to ask favors, &c.: the breast and right shoulder of which belonged to the priest, Le. 7:31, 34.

 OLDNESS, s. Ro. 7:6. not in o. of the letter OLIVE, s. is a tree full of fairness, and yields plenty of oil. There are two kinds. The cultivated olive-tree is of a moderate height, its trunk knotty, its bark smooth, and of an ash color; its wood is solid and yellowish, the leaves are oblong, and almost like those of the willow, of a green color, dark on the upper side, and white on the under. In June it puts forth white flowers, in bunches. The fruit is oblong and plump.
 The wild olive is smaller in all its parts. CRUEN.

PALM-Tree, s. is an upright, tall, fruit-bearing, flourishing, and shadowy tree, Ps. 92:12.
Song 7:7, 8. Jer. 10:5. It grows by the sweet springs of water, and continues long. It will not be pressed or bound downward, or grow crooked, though heavy weights be laid on it.
This tree is one of the most famous of all the forest, and is the usual emblem of constancy, fruitfulness, patience, and victory; which the more it is oppressed, the more it flourishes; the higher it grows, the stronger and broader it is in the top. One kind is the date-tree. The Hebrews called it Thamar, and the Greeks, Phoenix. The finest and best palm-trees were about Jericho, En-gedi, and along the banks of Jordan. Palm-trees from the same root produce Print of the Date-Palm; growing, and nearly ripe.

a great number of suckers, which form upwards a kind of forest by their spreading. It was under a little wood of palm-trees of this kind, that the prophetess Deborah dwelt between Ramah and PRAYERS, s. As offering up of our desires to God for things lawful and useful, with a humble confidence obtain them through the mediation of Christ, to the glory of God. Mat. 6:5. Ja. 16:23,24,36. It is either mental or vocal, ejaculatory or occasional, private or public, 1 Th. 5:12. We must pray constantly, Col. 4:2. fervently, Col. 4:12. sincerely, Ps. 17:1. with faith, Ja. 5:15. and repentance, Ps. 68:18. Jer. 36:7. and by the help of the Holy Spirit, Ro. 8:26.

Prayer comes from a Hebrew word, signifying appeal, intercession, intercession; whereby we offer our own cause, and that of others, to God.

The parts of Prayer are said to be invocation, adoration, confession, petition, pleading, dedication, thanksgiving, and blessing.

THE LORD'S PRAYER illustrated.

where it is applied to God's fore-ordinating those whom he foreknew, i. e. with approbation, namely of the Gentiles, as well as the Jews, to be conformable to the image of his Son, both in holiness and glory. So, Ep. 1:5. pre-ordained, having fore-appointed us, i. e. Believers in general, to the adoption of sons. But in v. 11. it relates particularly to the Jewish converts, who children of promise, pre-ordained, were taken, as it were, by lot, before being appointed, according to God's purpose of waiting under Christ, all things, both which are in heaven and earth, i. e. angels and men, Jews and Gentiles.
 Comp. v. 9. and 10.

1a 1 Co. 2:7. it refers to the gospel-plan of saving mankind, particularly the Gentiles, (see Ro. 16: 25, 26. Ep. 3:5, 8, 9.) which was ordained before the world began; see 2 Ti. 1:9. 1 Pe. 1:20. The above cited are all the passages of the N. T. wherein the verb occurs. 'The word predetermi-nate is taken for the design that God has been pleased to have from all eternity of bringing, by his free grace, to faith and eternal salvation, some certain persons, whom he loved in Christ; whilst he leaves others to continue in their infirmity, or in their corruptions. Those that are so left are the reprobate, and the others are the elect or predestinated.' CAUVEN.

PRIEST, s. The Priest, under the law, was a person consecrated and ordained of God, not only to teach the people, and pray for them, but also to offer up sacrifices for his own sins, and those of the people, La. 4:5. Before the promulgation of the law, the first-born of every family was a priest; but afterwards, the priesthood was limited to the tribe of Levi, Nu. 16:40.
The term Priest is properly applied to Christ, of whom the high-priests were types, He. 7:17.
|| 8:11. The word is also applied to true believers, who are enabled to offer spiritual sacrifices of prayer and praise to God, 1 Pe. 2:5.

PROSELYTE, s. In Greek Proselytos, which signifies a stranger. The Hebrew word Ger, or Necher, has the same signification. The Jews had two kinds of proselytes or converts; Proselytes of the Gate, who worshipped the true God, but did not submit to Jewish rites; and Proselytes of Justice, who submitted to the whole Jewish religion. These they allowed all privileges of this life, and the life to come.

Psallo, which signifies to touch sweetly. Psalms or Hymns are composed of words pithy and affecting, and commonly consist of a certain number of verses, or feet. The Psalms are properly placed in the middle of the Bible, being the very soul of godly experience, and of the whole gospel.
By the late Hebrew writers they are called Sepher- Tehillim, or Tehilloth, i. e. the book of Hymns or praises, because the subject thereof is the high praises of God. In 2 S. 23:1. they are called Zimroth Jisrael, i. e. the Psalms of Israel. In the N. T. Psalmoi, i. e. Psalms.
The book of Psalms is more frequently quoted in the N. T. than any other. Some note that it is quoted 64 times, and Isaiah 60. But I have counted 140 vs. in the N. T. in which this book is cited —

Six cities were appointed for refuge, three on the east of Jordan, Razer, i. e. fortification; Ra-moth-Gilead, i. e. exalted, and Golan, i. e. passage, revolution, or passing over. And three on the west of Jordan, Kedesh, i. e. holiness; Shechem, i. e. a part, or portion, and Hebron, i. e. fellowship, Jos. 20:7, 8. These were cities for the anavayer to take refuge in, and were typical of Christ, who is appointed a refuge for sinners to flee to, and find safety and rest in from sin, death, and hell, Pr. 18:10. He. 6:18.

REPENTANCE, s. is either, (1) Distress and trouble for the calamities procured by sin, in which sense Cain, Ahab, and Judas repented, Ge. 4:13. 1 K. 21:29. Mat. 27:3. Or, (2) A godly sorrow for sin, on account of its malignant nature, and offensiveness to God, which is accompanied with a hatred of sin, and a love of holiness, Ac. 11:18. 2 Co. 7:10.
Evangelical repentance is that saving grace wrought in the soul by the Spirit of God, whereby a sinner is made to see and be sensible of his sin, is grieved and humbled before God on account of it, not so much for the punishment for which sin has made him liable, as that thereby God is dishonored, and offended (his rights infringed), his laws (seen as holy, just, and good) violated, and his own soul polluted and defiled; and this grief arises from love to God, and is accompanied with a hatred of sin, a fixed resolution to forsake it, and an expectation of favor and forgiveness through the merits of Christ.
Mat. 3:2, 8. Ac. 3:19. 2 Co. 7:10. CAUSE.
Repentance, when ascribed to God, does not include a change of his mind, but a change of his outward conduct in his dispensations, Ma. 3:6.

SACRIFICE, s. is a solemn act of religious worship, which consisted in offering up, or devoting something, animate or inanimate, on an altar, by the hands of a priest, either as an expression of gratitude to God, for some special favor, or to show their dependence on him, or to conciliate his favor. Sacrifices were in use before, as well as under the law of Moses, and were of beasts, birds, bread, oil, &c. They may be distinguished into, (1) Typical sacrifices, as those already mentioned, Ez. 12:27. (2) The perfect, all-day sacient, and infinite sacrifice of Christ, whereby he hath atoned for and put away sin, He. 9:26.

So called from Sadoc, their first founder, who lived under Antigonius Sotocorus, who succeeded Simon the Just. They rejected all Scriptures except the five books of Moses, denied the immortality of the soul, future rewards, the resurrection of the body, and existence of angels or spirits.

 1 Th. 4:3. this is the will of God, even your s.
 4. should know how to possess his vessel in 2 Th. 2:13. through s. of the Spirit, 1 Pe. 1:2.
SANCTIFY, v. signifies, (1) To separate, set apart, and appoint anything to a holy use, Ge. 2:3. Ex. 13:2. He. 10:14. (2) To cleanse and purify sinners from the guilt, power, and pollution of sin, by the blood of Christ, and mighty operations of the Spirit of holiness, Ex. 36:35. 1 Co. 1:30. || 6:11. Ti. 3:5, 6. He. 9:14.
*This consists in mortification of sin, Col. 3:5. and vivification of grace, 2 Co. 4:16. Col. 3:10.
 (3) To honor and magnify,* Ez. 36:23. (4) To free the creature from the curse that sin has brought on it, 1 Ti. 4:5.
Sanctification differs from Justification.
 1. Justification is a change of our state from guilt and curse, to pardon and acquittance; sanctification is a change of our nature from death to life, and from uncleanness to holiness. 2. Justification is an instantaneous act, and completes at once; sanctification is gradual, and not complete till death. 3. Justification is by imputation of Christ's righteousness to us; sanctification is by grace communicated to us from Christ. 4.
Justification is the cause; sanctification is the effect.

A venomous reptile, somewhat like a small lobster, with a long, slender tail, and a deadly sting at the end of it. It has a bladder full of dangerous poison. Its head appears to be joined to the breast. It has 2 eyes in the middle of its head, and 2 towards its extremity, between which come out, as it were, 2 arms, which are divided into 3, like the claws of a lobster. It has 8 legs proceeding from its breast, and every one divided into 6 parts, covered with hair, at the end whereof are 6 talons or claws. The belly is divided into 7 rings, from the last of which the tail proceeds, which is divided into 7 little heads, of which the last is armed with a sting, filled with a cold poison, which it squirts into the part which it stings. The scorpion is of a blackish color, like soot; it waddles as it goes; and flies violently with its snout, and by its feet, on such persons as it seizes, so that it cannot be plucked off but with difficulty. The best and surest remedy against the bite is said to be to squeeze it to pieces on the wound. It is said the dam brings forth 11 small, wormlike and round young, who, after they are hatched, kill their mother.

It is put for, (1) Stinging punishments, 1 K. 12:11. (2) Cruel people, Ez. 2:6. (3) Antichristian heretics, Re. 9:3, 10.

 SELAH, *is a word found 74 times in the book of Psalms, and thrice in Habakkuk. Some think it signifies a rest or pause or singing, or a change of tone; others, the elevation of the voice, or a high note. Also, forever, or so be it. It is in general concluded that it properly signifies the end or pause. See Ps. 32, 42, 43, 44, 45, 46, 47, 48, 49, 50, SOUL. s. Heb. Nephesh; in Gr. Psuche. It signifies, (1) That rational, spiritual, and immortal substance in man, which is the origin of our thoughts, desires, and reasonings; and bears some resemblance of its divine Maker, Mat. 10:28. (2) The whole person, both soul and body, Ge. 1:25. (3) The life of man, Ps. 33:19. (4) Desire, love, inclination, Ge. 23:18. (5) The spirit of a brute, Ge. 1:24. Le. 17:11. Ec. 3:21.

The eternal salvation of my soul is of greater importance, and big with greater effect, than the temporal salvation of a whole kingdom, though it were for the space of ten thousand ages; because there will come up a point, an instant in eternity, when that one soul shall have existed as many ages, as all the individuals of a whole kingdom, ranged in close succession, will in the whole have existed in the space of ten thousand ages: Therefore one soul is capable of a larger share of happiness, or misery, throughout an endless eternity, for that will still be before it, were that a whole kingdom is capable of ten thousand ages. Da. Do not overlook.

STOICS, A sect of heathen philosophers; the followers of Zeno, who used to teach under a porch, or portico. They held that a wise man ought to be free from all passions, as they esteemed all things to be ordered by necessity and fate.
Josephus says, that the Stoics approach very near to the sentiments of the Stoics. They affected the same sterness, patience, equity, austerity.

and insensibility. The Stoics were in considerable numbers at Athens, when Paul came there, Ac. 17:18.

 SURETY, a. Christ is the surety of the better lea-surement, or covenant, He. 7:22. The word signifies, one that draws nigh; Christ drew nigh to his Father in the counsel of peace, and undertook to be the savior and redeemer of his people; he substituted himself in their place and died; he interposed between the creditor and the debtor, and became surety for the payment of the debt of the latter, and so stood engaged for them, and in their room. Christ is not the surety for the Father to his people, but for them to the Father; as to satisfy for their sins, to work out a righteousness for them, to preserve and keep them, and make them happy, which is an instance of matchless love. Da. GILL.

That of the temple, 22lb. 12oz. as appears by casting up the 3000 shekels, a shekel being 1 lb. 3d. or the fourth part of an ounce; therefore a common talent of gold was 2699d. 12s. and of silver, 187l. 10s. The talent of the sanctuary was twice as much. In Troy weight a common talent was 62lb. 6oz., and a talent of the sanctuary 125lb. If a talent of gold was of no more value than a talent of silver, as some think, then in Troy weight it was but 3lb. 11oz. and in avoirdupois 2lb. 14oz.; consequently it is easy to account for the king's crown being a talent of gold, 2 S. 12:30. and it might occasionally be worn without any great inconvenience. TEMPLE, s. signifies, A house or dwelling of God; or a building set apart for the worship of the true God. It is spoken, (1) Of that mag- nificent building erected by Solomon at Jerusalem, about 1000 years before Christ. It was the grandest pile of building that was ever erected by man, not for its bigness, it being but 150 feet in length, 105 in breadth, including the sanctuary, sanctuary, and the porch, (according to some) but its excellency consisted in its materials, out-buildings, and costly ornaments and decorations; and especially in these marks of divine favour it was honored with. (1) The ark of the cove- nant. (2) The Shechinah, or divine presen- ce. (3) The Urim and Thumim, by which the high-priest consulted God in difficult and important cases. (4) The holy fire. 1 K. 8:39.
(5) The spirit of prophecy. All these were said to be wanting in the second temple; but were eminently in Christ, whose presence in it made the glory of it greater than that of the first temple, Hag. 2:9. (II) It is spoken of the tabernacle, 1 S. 1:9. || 3:3. (III) Of Christ's body, or human nature, in which the fulness of the Godhead dwelleth bodily. Jn. 2:19. Col. 2:9. (IV) Of the church of God. 2 Co. 6:16. (V) Of heaven, which is God's throne. Ps. 11:4. Re. 7:15.
(VI) Of individual Christians. 1 Co. 3:16, 17.

THUMMIM. Urim and Thummin signify light and perfection, or the shining and the perfect; according to Jerome, doctrine and judgment; the LXX, declaration, or manifestation, and truth. There are various conjectures about the Urim and Thummin, whether they were the stones in the high-priest's breast-plate, or something distinct from them; which it is not worth our while to inquire into, since God has left it a secret. It is evident that the Urim and Thum-min were appointed to inquire of God by, on momentous occasions; and continued in use (as some think) only till the building of Solomon's temple; and all conclude, that this was never restored after its destruction.

 USURER, v. Ex. 22:25. not be to him as a u.
 USURP, v. 1 Ti. 2:12. not a woman to u.
 USURY, s. is a certain gain or profit which a person makes of his money or goods by lending the same. This is, if but a common profit, lawful; but it is generally taken in an evil sense, viz. for an unlawful profit which a person makes of his money or goods. The Hebrew word for usury signifies: biting. All usury among the Israelites was forbidden; but to a stranger they might lend upon usury, De. 23:20. This law of not taking usury appears to be peculiar to the Jewish state, for to us it seems as equitable to make profit of our money as of our lands.

 VOICE, s. The daughter of the voice, called in Hebrew, Bath-kol, was, as the Jewish writers say, a preternatural way in which God disseminated his will to them after prophecy had ceased in Israel. On this bath-kol, which they pretended was an articulate voice from God, as he spoke to Samuel, are founded many of their traditions and customs of their nation.

WILES, a. Nu. 25:18. Ep. 6:11.
WILLY, ad. Jos. 9:4. Gibeonites did work w.
WILL, w. is that faculty of the soul whereby we freely choose or refuse. The will is naturally prone to evil; but may choose good under the influence of that true light, that enlighteneth every man that cometh into the world, Jn. 1:9.
The will of God is taken, (1) For his irresistible operations, Is. 43:13. Ro. 9:19. (2) For his purpose and counsel, Ep. 1:11. (3) For his precepts and commands, He. 13:21.
God's purposing will is the rule of his conduct; his commanding will, the rule of ours.
The phrase I will is frequently annexed to the promises, to denote their absoluteness and certainty, Jer. 31:33, 34.

WISDOM, s. Heb. Chachemah; Gr. Sophia.
Wisdom, knowledge, and understanding, are generally looked upon as synonymous terms, or words of the same import; yet, perhaps, they are more accurate who consider them as distinct.
Knowledge consists in having a stock of judicious and proper ideas and notions of things; Wisdom consists in reducing these to practice, in conducting an affair with ingenuity and skill.
Knowledge hath its seat in the speculative understanding, Wisdom in the practical. Knowledge is an understanding of general rules; Wisdom is a drawing conclusions from these rules, in order to particular cases. A man may have the knowledge of the whole Scripture, and have all learning in the treasury of his memory, and yet be destitute of skill to make use of them on particular occasions. CHARNOCK.
Hence a person may have considerable knowledge, who yet, in respect to wisdom, is a fool. Such are all who know the will of God, but do it not, Pr. 17:16.
It is put for, (1) That prudence which enables WOLF, s. Is. 13:17. Zeeb; is Greek, Lycos.

 It is very fierce and voracious, an enemy to cattle, ravenous, greedy, crafty, gregarious, of a quick smell and sight. In the absence of the shepherd and his dog, they enter the fold and kill all therein before they begin to eat.
